

PPNYC's Teen Advocates in the South Bronx received a grant to create a public awareness campaign about preventing teen pregnancy. They designed and photographed eye-catching horizontal and vertical billboards for 10 different locations in the South Bronx.

The billboards show teens who are thinking about their future goals and planning to avoid early pregnancy by postponing sex or using birth control.

Find out what YOU can do to prevent teen pregnancy

For information about all of PPNYC's programs for teenagers, click here or call Louise Marchena at (212) 965-4834.

Learn more about PPNYC's Teen Advocate Program in the South Bronx and on the Lower East Side. The Teen Advocates are teen peer educators who devise and perform compelling interactive theatrical workshops about a variety of sexuality issues that teens confront.

PPNYC has a number of FREE publications for and about teens. Go to our Publications page to check them out and find out how to obtain them.