At the start of 2017, we, like many others across the country had trepidation about what the future would hold. Planned Parenthood had a target on its back and newly elected leaders openly discussed their intent to eliminate us. Throughout the year, I can say with certainty that the support of our patients, staff, volunteers, donors and advocates got us where we are today. Our doors remain open. Our opponents have failed. We are stronger than ever.

In 2017, we saw a 23 percent increase in the number of patients who came to us for care. And, more than 24,500 new supporters across our four-state region joined the Planned Parenthood movement to help power the fights ahead and over the long haul.

With all the odds stacked against us, we made some great strides toward the future. From the purchase of a new building in Hawaii, to advanced trainings across our affiliate, expanded operations, and an unrelenting advocacy team, this affiliate is strong.

Compassionate, non-judgmental health care that’s accessible to everyone is what matters to us. Our patients, our health center staff, and people like you are the heart and soul of Planned Parenthood. We are so grateful to this community, and we will never stop fighting for the people we serve. Thanks for being a part of this work. We look forward to what lies ahead for our movement.

- Chris Charbonneau, PPGNHI CEO
PPGNHI is resolute in its efforts to invest in racial equity initiatives across the organization from policies and practices, to workforce composition. In order for all of us to have full control over our sexual and reproductive lives, we must work to end all forms of oppression and promote human rights. Together, we must name and address these barriers and tackle systemic oppression head on. This is a top priority for the organization, and the Equity & Inclusion Department will be at the forefront of this work.

As part of agency-wide strategic planning in 2016, we conducted a Racial Equity Assessment. It assessed everything from staff and leadership, to patient interaction, to engagement with the communities we serve—especially those most marginalized by racism and other forms of oppression. As a result, three of the seven major initiatives of our strategic plan are directly tied to promoting social justice while centering racial equity. To bring this work to life in 2017, we hired two full-time staff who developed a racial equity approach that includes leadership commitment, an Equity Committee, an agency-wide racial equity plan, and key training across the affiliate to build self-awareness and skills. We look forward to furthering this work through system and policy review and cross-departmental working groups that will foster improved community engagement.
The Clinical Services team had one of its biggest years to date. In 2017, our patient numbers grew and we continued to meet demand with new services, improved patient experience, and a focus on innovation. The number of patients who entrust us with their care is critical to helping keep our doors open. We remain committed, despite the political rhetoric, to providing expert, non-judgmental, quality and affordable care across our four-state region.

Last year, our telemedicine offerings remained dynamic and prove to be a tool that helps eliminate barriers to care and information. We are proud to have offered life-saving pre-exposure prophylaxis for HIV (PrEP) in all 27 health centers. We also participated in research studies that address various reproductive health care needs and how best to administer care to our patients.

Throughout 2017, our Education Department was caught in the political crosshairs. Planned Parenthood is the largest provider of sex education, and plays an integral role in helping reduce unintended teen pregnancies and teen birth rates, which are now at a 40-year low. The decision by the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services (HHS) to cut local Teen Pregnancy Prevention programs across the country set off alarm bells. We were notified that the government funding to support new, innovative, and inclusive sex education programs would end two years earlier than expected. This could have been a loss of $3.75 million per year for programs providing valuable resources to communities most at risk, but we have since won a court battle in 2018 to restore at least another year of these funds.

The evidenced-based programs we put into practice are essential for empowering young people to lead safe and healthy lives, ensuring individuals have access to critical care that thousands rely on each year. One such program is Linking Families and Teens (LiFT), which provides teen pregnancy prevention education to rural youth and their families. Another program, INcluded, helps meet the needs of LGBTQ youth by providing them with relevant sex education. Our capacity building programs are working to support other youth serving organizations and we’re supporting local advisory boards to ensure programs meet specific community needs. We will never stop fighting for comprehensive, inclusive sex education.

Teen Council is a peer education program that equips young people to be effective sexual health educators and social justice advocates in their community. The program is currently running in 14 states and continues to grow nationwide.
Planned Parenthood Votes Northwest and Hawaii is a separately incorporated, nonprofit, nonpartisan organization educating residents and policymakers about reproductive health issues in Alaska, Hawaii, Idaho and Washington.

Following the 2016 election, PPVNH immediately jumped into action and helped coordinate thousands to turn out, speak out and take action. Through the work of the entire team in 2017, we are an unstoppable force and are helping change the conversation in state legislatures, voting booths and our nation’s capital.

The Planned Parenthood advocacy team isn’t backing down - ever. In this untenable political climate, we are only further motivated by our volunteers, donors, supporters, and activists who continue to fight back with us against bad legislation and elected officials who want to roll back decades of progress.

In 2017, PPGNHI’s Global Programs launched a $1.3 million project in Malawi in collaboration with VillageReach, a Seattle-based nonprofit. VillageReach has had a presence in the southeast African country of Malawi since 2008, but developed a partnership with Planned Parenthood last year to leverage our unique expertise in providing reproductive health care and education to teens and young adults. The overall goal of the project, funded by the U.S. Department of State as part of the DREAMS Innovation Challenge, and managed by JSI Research and Training Institute, is to reduce the incidence of HIV among adolescent girls and young women in the country. In Malawi, young people account for 50 percent of all new HIV infections, and adolescent girls and young women are particularly at risk.

Planned Parenthood collaborated with VillageReach staff to develop and implement a youth-friendly sexual and reproductive health training program for workers on a hotline with national reach. The program utilizes a continuous improvement approach to ensure hotline workers can meet the specific needs of young people in Malawi, and connect them effectively with the education and health care they need.
